DVAR TORAH IN A STORY >>

THE DYBBUK DESTROYER

כל זמן שבהמ"ק קיים מזבח מכפר על ישראל, ועכשיו שלחנו של אדם מכפר

"As long as the Beis Hamikdash stood, the Mizbe'ach brought atonement for Yisrael. Now, a person's table brings atonement" (Brachos 55a)

There was a time when a dybbuk could enter a person. A dybbuk is a spiritual force, or even a neshamah, from the world of tumah. At times, a dybbuk could move into a person's body and control him. Talmidei chachamim were able to force the dybbuk out, but it was a long and often dangerous process. The last authentic dybbuk occurred in the days of the Chafetz Chaim. He chased it away with the help of his talmid, Rav Elchanan Wasserman, who later testified that the Chafetz Chaim had said there would be no more.

A series of dybbuks plagued the Jewish communities in the times of Rav Eliyahu Kramer, the Vilna Gaon. In one such incident, a child began acting strangely in the courtyard of the great Vilna shul. An odd, adult-sounding deep voice emanated from the child's throat, and he did not seem to be in control of himself. It seemed like a classic case of a dybbuk.

The child's parents were frantic, and they immediately consulted several famous rabbanim who were expert at chasing away dybbuks. There were a few steps to the process: first, it had to be clear that this was a real dybbuk, because there were often fakes, or medical conditions with similar symptoms. Then, the rabbanim would set to work, using kemiyos, particular tefillos, specially recited Kabbalistic names of Hashem, and other powerful forces of taharah to chase away the source of tumah from the "other side," or sitra achra.

PARSHAH RIDDLES

Answers to this week's riddles appear on page 3.

- 1 Which korban had its blood placed on the "horns" of the Mizbe'ach?
- 2 Which korban was never eaten during daylight?
- 3 What went on every korban?
- 4 In what ways were a Korban Olah and Chatas exact opposites? In what ways were animal korbanos the exact opposite of bird korbanos?
- 5 Which korbanos came with breads that were baked, but not put on the Mizbe'ach? Which of them contained chametz?

SERIAL >> CHAPTER 13

CHOLENT STORY

A story told in parts, designed to get children to come back to the table for the main dish!

Recap: Efraim is kidnapped by the poritz and the kishuf-macher. The Maharal awakens in the night and comes to the yeshiva, finding the bachurim asleep and Efraim gone.

yvey!"

The Maharal quickly shook the sleeping boys. Slowly, groggily, they rose to the surface of their consciousness, shaking off the deep, deep sleep the kishuf-macher had cast upon them. "What happened?" the Maharal asked.

"Rebbi, we're so sorry! We don't know what happened! Efraim kept trying to get out of the beis midrash, and we were holding him back, and all of a sudden you were waking us up. We must have fallen asleep, and we can't imagine how. And now Efraim is gone!" The bachurim began to weep in distress.

"It's okay, there is nothing you could have done about it. There are some kochos hatumah at play here, I was wrong to leave the responsibility to others. Come, we may still be able to save Efraim. Quickly, let us gather a minyan!"

The boys quickly roused some of their chaveirim and met the Maharal in the beis midrash. Together, the group fervently recited Tehillim, crying over the ancient words, begging Hashem to save the innocent child.

The dark black carriage, pulled by coal-black horses with red eyes, raced through the silent streets. The city of Prague was asleep at this late hour, and the carriage, with its precious load, was charging for the city gates. The kishuf-macher knew he would still have to battle the Maharal as long as he was within the gates.

The carriage charged up to the gates of the city, the horses sweating and steaming in the chilly air, their eyes rolling in their heads. But they pulled up short at the edge of the city.

The gates were locked!

The men in the carriage were thrown forward as it stopped short. "What's going on?" the poritz asked.

"The gates are locked. Can you get them open?"

The poritz jumped out of the carriage and approached the gates. They were big, thick iron gates, locked with heavy chains. A sign near the gates read: "Prague City Gates. Locked Dusk to Dawn." In frustration, the poritz grabbed the gates with both hands and rattled them.

"Can I help you, sir? Or would you like to spend the night in prison?" a voice called out. The poritz turned, and a big, burly police constable stepped out of the nearby guard hut and approached him.

"Officer, open these gates immediately! I must leave the city on important business!"

"Important business, eh?" The constable was in no mood for attitude from some rich guy in a fancy coach. He squinted in the dim light. "What business, eh? Criminal business, I wager!"

"Do you know who I am? I am the Governor of Lunchitz! I demand passage through these gates at once!"

The fat constable stuck a toothpick between his brown teeth and wagged it about impudently. "Governor, eh? Of what did you say? Lunch?"

The poritz's face turned red with anger. He was about to start shouting at the cop, when he realized that his important position in Poland meant nothing here in Prague. Dejected, he climbed back into the carriage. "Can't you do anything?" he asked the kishuf-macher. "Put him to sleep, or something?"

"No, that wouldn't do. We'll have to spend the night. We'll leave first thing at dawn."

The wagon turned and headed for an all-night inn in the city. The two men rented a room for the night, and led Efraim, now clutching his precious harp, still in a trance-like state, indoors to wait for dawn.

After saying Tehillim, the Maharal headed for the one place the kochos of tumah have no power—the mikvah. Concentrating fiercely, he descended under its purifying waters.

As the water closed over the Maharal's head, across town, where the kidnapers slept in the inn, the breath of the ancient kishuf-macher caught in his throat.

The Maharal rose from the water. The kishuf-macher snored and breathed easier.

Again, the Maharal descended into the water, and the kishuf-macher stopped breathing. Long seconds passed. The Maharal was under the water, and the kishuf-macher was in his bed. Neither could breathe.

The Maharal rose from the water again, inhaling deeply. Across town, the old sorcerer drew a weak, ragged breath.

The Maharal prepared to enter the water a third, and final time.

DVAR TORAH >>

LITVAK, CHASSID, SEPHARDI

Three different angles on a dvar Torah, one each in classic Litvish, Chassidic, and Sephardic styles. Can your children guess which idea comes from which school of thought!

וַיִּקְרָא אֶל מֹשֶׁה וַיְדַבֵּר ה' אֵלָיו מֵאֵהָל מוֹעֵד לֵאמֹר

"And He called to Moshe, and Hashem spoke to him from the Ohel Moed, saying" (Vayikra)

א' דוֹיִקְרָא זַעֲרִיא שְׁמֵשָׁה לֹא רַצָּה לִכְתּוֹב אֲלָא וַיִּקְרַךְ כִּדְרָךְ שְׁנָא בְּבַלְעֵם כְּאֵלוֹ לֹא נִרְאֶה לוֹ הַשֵּׁם אֲלָא בַמְּקָרָה

"The aleph in 'Vayikra' is small, because Moshe wanted to [leave it out and] write וַיִּקְרַךְ, like it says about Bilaam, meaning Hashem only 'happened' to meet him" (Baal Haturim)

How could Moshe consider writing וַיִּקְרַךְ if it wasn't true?! Hashem did call him! Does humility justify writing falsehood in the Torah?

CHASAM SOFER:

It is not entirely false. All other prophets, even Jewish ones, required extensive preparations to receive nevuah, but Moshe received nevuah without a moment's notice, almost as if Hashem "happened" to meet him. The truth is that it was a praise for Moshe—that his level was so close to Hashem as to be almost casual—but Moshe meant for it to be read as a coincidence.

MEGALEH AMUKOS:

וַיִּקְרַךְ would be read as "and it was precious," and would be referring to the small א, meaning that even the tiniest letter of Torah learning (Valef means to study Torah) is more precious than all the korbanos the Torah is about to describe. The rest of the pasuk is read: וַיְדַבֵּר ה' אֵלָיו—Hashem's speaking to Moshe (i.e., teaching Torah) is מֵאֵהָל מוֹעֵד—more important than the avodah done in the אֵהָל מוֹעֵד.

R. CHAIM TUITO:

וַיִּקְרַךְ would refer to kavod, and it would be read as א-וִיקְרַךְ; one who makes himself small like the א becomes וַיִּקְרַךְ, honored. As Chazal say, one who runs away from kavod is chased by it. Moshe here is the classic example of that.

PERSONAL GROWTH AVODAH OF THE WEEK

This section views the procession of parshiyos and Yamim Tovim as a ladder for personal growth. It identifies a theme in the parshah and a related area that needs growth, and assigns a weekly mission based upon it.

Parshah summary

Parshas Vayikra teaches a broad overview of the various categories of korbanos and their particular laws to all of Klal Yisrael, as opposed to future details of korbanos, which were said only to kohanim.

After introducing the general rules applying to all korbanos, the Torah discusses the four main categories of korbanos and their subcategories. 1) Korban Olah, including animals and birds; 2) Korban Minchah, including soles, oven-baked, pan-baked, and deep-pan; 3) Shelamim, including sheep or goats; 4) Chatas, including that of the kohen gadol, the majority of the community, the nasi, and several types for the individual; and 5) Korban Asham, including vadai, talui, and gezeilos.

The purpose of korbanos is discussed at length by the Rishonim. It is clear, though, that Hashem does not need our korbanos, for He is infinite and owns everything anyway. It is a giving of oneself, of one's most precious and valuable possession, a literal self-sacrifice, that draws us close to Hashem. And when korbanos became rote, and the connection was lost, they were quickly taken away.

AVODAH OF THE WEEK:

1. We don't have korbanos today, but we can still give of ourselves in the most meaningful way. Remember, it is all His anyway; it is the willingness to give that makes the connection. Find two very dear things you know you should be giving up, and do so this week—for Him.

2. Pesach is another exchange of gifts. The hard work we will put in this week is a gift we give Him (which, again, He does not need) and the free lift to higher levels is a gift we will receive in return. Pesach prep is still hard, but how much greater a gift it is, when we do it with simchah!

RIDDLE ANSWERS:

1. חטאת חיצונה
2. קרבן פסח
3. Salt
4. For an animal, the blood of an Olah went below the red line on the Mizbe'ach, while for Chatas it went above it. This was inverted for a bird—the blood of a bird Olah went above the line, while that of a Chatas went below.
5. The Lechem Hapanim, as well as the Korban Tzibbur of Shavuos, the korban of the Nazir, and a Korban Todah all have baked breads that did not go on the Mizbe'ach. The ones for Shavuos and some of the ones for a Korban Todah were chametz.

Did you notice that the story of the haftorah, besides relating to the depth of the parshah or day, usually sounds like it is right out of current events?

HAFTORAH FROM THE HEADLINES

HAFTORAH SUMMARY

The navi Yeshayahu reprimands Klal Yisrael for doing acts of service to Hashem with no heart. They are bringing korbanos while still keeping idols, and they have become bored with their avodas Hashem. The purpose of the korbanos is not being achieved.

The navi ridicules worship of sticks and stones. He reminds the people what their purpose is, and the purpose of their avodah. He also exhorts the people to teshuvah and promises abundant blessings and the ultimate redemption if they do.

CONNECTION TO PARSHAS VAYIKRA

Vayikra details the korbanos and their procedure but also notes that it must come from within you—for Hashem does not need your animals or food. Korbanos are an opportunity for building meaningful connections by sacrificing for each other, but it is all lost and meaningless if it is done by rote. The haftorah makes the same point. The navi even details things that Hashem has “sacrificed” for us—making the forms of service easier and not burdensome, for the connection is the most important point.

RIPPED FROM THE HEADLINES

The problem of serving Hashem by rote—going through the motions and actions, mumbling the words, all without meaningful connection—is possibly the greatest challenge facing people accustomed to a frum lifestyle.

Pesach is an opportunity to escape that trap by celebrating our birth and purpose. The haftorah emphasizes the purpose of the Jewish People in the world, a central theme of Pesach. Many pesukim from the haftorah also appear in the prayers of the Yamim Nora'im, because this is a call to rebirth and refresh.

There was a commotion in the courtyard of the shul. People were frightened and alarmed, and some had gone to call the rabbanim. Suddenly, a window to the courtyard opened, and a hush immediately fell over the crowd. The window that had opened was one that was almost always closed—it was the window of the private study of the Vilna Gaon.

The Gaon learned almost non-stop throughout the day and night, sleeping less than two hours. It was rare for him to interrupt his learning, even for a moment. But now, his window had opened! Even the dybbuk was alarmed, and it immediately cried out.

“Oy, rebbe!” the deep adult male voice spoke from the child’s throat. “You are the one about whom it is said in Shamayim: ‘Beware of Rabbi Eliyahu and his Torah learning!’ Whatever you say, I am bound to follow. If you tell me to leave, I will go right away, without the need for sheimos, kemiyos, or anything!”

The crowd was stunned. Could the whole story end in a moment? It was like the Gemara in the end of Ma-seches Pesachim, in which sheidim tell Abaye that they are afraid of him!

But it was not to be. “I will have nothing to do with you!” the Gaon responded to the dybbuk. “I will have no interaction with you. I will tell you nothing. I have no connection with the sitra achra!” With that, the Gaon withdrew, and closed the window.

Shortly afterward, another dybbuk appeared in a Novaradok, a different city in Europe. The scene was very similar: a child began acting strangely, and expert rabbanim were called.

The first step was to check the authenticity of the dybbuk. The rabbanim now had a new tool to use: They knew any real dybbuk would be terrified of the Vilna Gaon! That was how they could test it.

One of the rabbanim approached the dybbuk. “We are taking you to Rabbi Eliyahu of Vilna!” he declared to the force of tumah. “He will drive you away in a second!”

But the deep voice of the dybbuk laughed. “It is true, we dybbuks are terrified of the Gaon of Vilna. But we already heard the news—he won’t say anything to us! He won’t get involved with us. The whole sitra achra knows we don’t need to fear his involvement anymore.”

The rav wanted to understand more. “Why are you so terrified of him? He learns all day, but otherwise he is a regular person. It’s not like he fasts all day like a mal-ach or anything. He is still part of the physical world!”

The dybbuk laughed again. “How little you understand. When the Vilna Gaon eats, it is worse for us than any fast! His eating is like a korban being brought on the Mizbe’ach, as the Gemara says in Brachos: “As long as the Beis Hamikdash stood, the Mizbe’ach brought atonement for Yisrael. Now, a person’s table atones.” The food eaten by the Vilna Gaon is used only for Torah and mitzvos, and that is more powerful than any amount of fasting.”

SET UP FOR DISCUSSION

See this week's Circle magazine for the full comic story and halachic dilemma.

TO CLEAN OR NOT TO CLEAN

Generally a shoel obligated to pay for damages, even when they occur b'oness. However, when damage occurs in the normal course of usage there are authorities who maintain that the borrower is exempt (C.M. 340:3, see also Shach C.M. 340:5). However, since there are Poskim who question this ruling, it is proper for the borrower to pay for the cleaning. Clearly, if the owner stipulated that the garment should be cleaned before it is returned, that commitment must be honored.

פְּרָחַק מִזְרַח מִמְעַרְב הֶרְחִיק מִמֶּנּוּ אֶת פְּשָׁעֵינוּ

“As distant as east from west, distance our sins from us”

(Tehillim 103:12)

How far is east from west?

- 312 = מְעַרְב
- 255 = מִזְרַח
- 312–255 = 57 = חֲזוּבָה

How will Hashem distance our sins from us? Through [korbanos brought on] the חֲזוּבָה, which is the difference between east and west.

THIS DATE IN JEWISH HISTORY

On the 7th of Nissan, the 30-day mourning period for Moshe Rabbeinu ended. Yehoshua bin Nun took over leadership of Klal Yisrael and made his first speech. He relayed Hashem's message to the people to prepare themselves to cross into Eretz Yisrael. As Hashem blessed and encouraged him, he told them to be strong. They wholeheartedly accepted him as leader.

On that day, or possibly two days earlier, he sent two spies, Kalev and Pinchas, to get a sense of the morale of the Canaanim. The two traveled to Yericho but were spotted. They hid in the home of Rachav, who helped them escape while she misled the king's soldiers into thinking they had gone in a different direction. In return, Klal Yisrael spared her and her family in the war, and she ended up marrying Yehoshua himself.

HALACHAH

Birchas Ilanos (Blessing on the Trees)

What is the purpose of birchas ilanos?

The Shitah Mekubetzes explains that birchas ilanos is a brachah of praise inspired by the sight of the revival and rejuvenation of the trees after the winter. It is meant to be said on a once-per-year natural occurrence. The Aruch Hashulchan adds that the shevach is for the fact that Hashem created for us more than is necessary for survival (we could do without fruits, but not without vegetables). The blossoms add an extra beauty to trees in the spring, and they announce the coming of the fruits.

When can the brachah be said?

The Gemara in Brachos says that one who sees a blossoming tree “in the days of Nissan” says the brachah. The Birkei Yosef understands this to mean that the brachah can only be said during Nissan, but the Mishnah Berurah and most poskim are clear that Nissan is merely the usual time in which a tree blossoms (in the northern hemisphere) but that the brachah can be said on a proper tree during any month. Unlike some other birchos re'iyah, the brachah does not have to be said the first time someone spots a blossoming fruit tree, although zerizim will not put it off.

During what stage of fruit development can the brachah be said?

The Tur and Shulchan Aruch say the brachah has to be said on a tree with blossoms. The Mordechai says it can also be said on a tree with fruits that no longer has blossoms. The Bach understands that all agree that the brachah needs to be said at the first opportunity—if you saw a blossoming tree and did not say it, you can't say it later on a tree with fruits; but if the first time you see fruit trees they are in the fruity stage, you can say the brachah. The Mishnah Berurah allows one to say the brachah on a tree with fruits if he never saw any tree with blossoms. This is true even if the fruits are large. When they are fully ripe, or ripe enough to say Shehecheyanu, one can no longer say birchas ilanos.

Only one blossom is required, even if most have fallen off and there are fruits already in their place. One cannot say the brachah on a tree with only leaves.

On what kind of trees should one say the brachah?

It is best to travel outside the city to a field or orchard to say the brachah on a few trees growing together (not at the cost of bitul Torah). Because the brachah is phrased in the plural, it should preferably be said when there are at least two different types of fruit trees growing nearby, or at least two trees, even of the same species. One may not say the brachah on fruitless trees, and the fruit should preferably be edible. If one says the brachah and later finds out that it was a fruitless tree, he does not say it again (the brachah does not specifically mention fruits).

Can the brachah be said on trees with halachic issues?

Trees that have a mixture of species grafted together are problematic; some allow the brachah to be said on them, while others say the brachah, which is blessing Hashem, should not be said on a tree of which He disapproves. The same applies to trees planted in a kilayim situation. There is a dispute among the Acharonim as to whether the brachah can be said on a tree within three years of planting, because the fruits are then forbidden as orlah. If the orlah status of the tree is unclear—because the time of planting is unknown, or if it was moved within three years with a root ball that may not be large enough to avoid orlah—it is permitted only outside of Eretz Yisrael.

Can the brachah be said on Shabbos or Yom Tov?

Some caution that saying the brachah on Shabbos or Yom Tov may lead one to pick a flower. Rav Ovadia permitted it. However, it is important to be careful not to carry a siddur with the text of the brachah (and keep in mind that growing fruits may not be smelled on Shabbos).
